Community Access National Network Launches Digital Microsite for its Flagship Program, HIV/HCV Co-Infection Watch

Patient education program enters its sixth year

WASHINGTON, DC (January 12, 2021) – The Community Access National Network, otherwise known as CANN, today announced that it has launched a digital microsite to house its HIV/HCV Co-Infection Watch. The flagship program now enters its sixth year offering a patient-centric informational portal serving three primary groups – patients, healthcare providers, and AIDS Service Organizations.

“People living with HIV-infection face a higher risk of long-term liver failure as a result of co-infection with Hepatitis C,” summarized William E. Arnold, President & CEO of the Community Access National Network. “In fact, HCV-related liver failure has become the leading non-AIDS-related cause of death among people living with HIV-infection in the United States – and as such, treating HCV is of paramount importance.”

The HIV/HCV Co-Infection Watch focuses on the intersection between co-infection of HIV/AIDS and Hepatitis C, through the collective lenses of the State AIDS Drug Assistance Programs, State Medicaid Programs, Veterans Affairs Programs, Patient Assistance Programs, and Harm Reduction Programs

The microsite is available online at <https://www.hiv-hcv-watch.com>.
